Salisbury Street home burglarized

Area police are searching for Michael Duval, 48, whose last known address was in Maine, in connection with three home break-ins, including one on Salisbury Street in Holden on Monday afternoon.

The homeowner interrupted Duval around 2 p.m. Monday as Duval was emerging from the Salisbury Street home, police said. Duval asked the homeowner if he wanted his driveway paved and then left.

The homeowner discovered various small items, whose worth has not yet been determined, missing from the home and informed police. He was able to give police a description and a partial registration. He also identified Duval from photographs.

Millbury Police also supplied identifying information. Duval is wanted in connection with breaks in Millbury and one in Rutland, in which a firearm was taken.

As The Landmark went to press, police in Central Massachusetts were still searching for Duval.

Holden Patrolman Robert Himmer is investigating with assistance from Detective Christopher Carey.
